What now?

This isn't a diagnosis. These statements reflect the experience of burnout for some people. To seek clinical information on burnout please check with your health care provider.

What does my score say?

The scoring is based on how you ranked each of the statements from 1-5.

Once you are done add up your score (one point for each item in column one, two points for each item in column two, etc.) and check below for your results.

18-20

You report little to no signs of burnout. You have the opportunity to further prevent it.

21-35

You report signs consistent with burnout and should begin to take steps to reduce your risk.

36-49

You report significant signs consistent with burnout. We recommend speaking with your health care practitioner.

50+

You report serious signs consistent with burnout. Please speak with your health care practitioner and consider reaching out to family and friends for help and support.
